UW STUDENT APPOINTED TO SHAPE FUTURE OF MAGICHITE

Laramie - Nearly one year after the discovery of huge magichite deposits in many areas in Wyoming, Governor Y. O Ming has rocked the world again with the announcement of the Wyoming citizen who will chair the Magichite Development Task Force. University of Wyoming Student Your Name Goes Here has been appointed to chair this influential task force slated to lead the state into a new era of research and development. For the first time in recent Wyoming legislative history, long time rivals Senators B. Careful and Chase A. Dream agreed on an issue. Voicing their concern jointly they questioned, "What in the heck was the governor thinking?" Ming defended his decision countering, "Who better to look to the future than those will be living in it?" Your Name Goes Here was amazed and delighted at the appointment. When asked why s/he was given the responsibility, Here replied brightly, "Why not me?"
