

Task Summary: K-3 Safety Rules

With your teacher, talk about why safety rules are important and what can happen if you don't follow them.

Think of how many different safety rules you know right now for home, school, playing outside, walking home from school, when you are ill, riding your bike or skateboard, or for other activities like being on the internet. Tell them to your teacher when she/he calls on you so that as a class you can make a huge list.

With the help of your teacher, categorize the rules on the list using the questions below.

Your teacher will be your guide on this learning journey, and together you will travel the internet highway finding the information you need to write Mr. Big's safety manual.

With your teacher, make a list of all the safety rules for mining that you thought of during your internet adventures. They can be about things to do that can keep the miners safe, special equipment to protect them, or actions they should not do.

Your teacher will tell you how many rules you will work on for your safety manual for miners. Draw a picture for each rule that will show the miners how to stay safe while working. Label the parts of the picture or ask your teacher to help you write the rule on your picture.

When the pictures are finished, the teacher will put them together.
